SUBJECT: After Action Report and Critique for the Month of January.

TO: Commanding General, 101st Airborne Division, APO 472, U.S. Army

1. Transmitted herewith is After Action Report of this regiment for the month of January 1945. The critique of the operation follows:

2. In the attack through the Bois Jacques, which this regiment supported by fire, there was lack of coordination of effort. This was particularly noticeable to this regiment's front because of the fact that the attacking regiment was supposed to have cleared this area of Germans. Further check revealed that this was caused by lack of coordination with the armored unit on that regiment's right. This merely brings out the importance of flank security.

3. In an attack which this regiment captured Rambamps, supporting artillery could not be used because the system of relaying fire data broke down. It is believed that the fire direction center should have been far enough to the front so as to preclude the use of relaying observations and adjustments.

4. On the regiment's move from north to south by truck, 10-ton trailers were provided. These prime movers had only a rear-wheel drive and the journey over the ice and snow was one fraught with many tedious delays. Many of these vehicles also had no chains. The slightest incline would cause them to become immobile.

5. Prior to an attack which will culminate with the objective in a wooded area, arrangements should be made with engineer troops for cutting of logs for covering of new positions. This regiment sustained heavy casualties due to lack of cover on individual shelters.

6. Control and coordination of attack with armored units on the flank was found to be difficult. This may have been due to a lack of definite orders as to responsibility.

7. When enemy armor is encountered tank destroyers should be more aggressive and certain vehicles should work with the forward elements of the infantry while still maintaining their antitank defense in depth with reserve vehicles.

SUBJECT: After Action Report and Critique for the Month of February.

TO: Commanding General, 101st Airborne Division, APO 472, U.S. Army

1. Transmitted herewith is After Action Report of this regiment for the month of February 1945. The critique of the operation follows:

2. Action during the month of February consisted principally of extensive and continued patrolling. It was found that the most successful patrols should be given 48 hours to plan their work. Supporting weapons, including mortar and artillery, were found to be most desirable.

3. On an inactive front extensive patrolling should take place. Each battalion should have at least three patrols briefed and prepared to operate on call. This should include at least one of platoon or company size capable of operating as a raiding party. Further training in large size raiding was found to be needed.

4. The method of making a direct exchange of clean underwear, socks, and combat clothing article for article was found to greatly decrease the excessive amounts of loss of this type of equipment.

5. The regiment in moving from Alsace to Mourmelon were loaded on the French box cars with straw on the floor. This proved to be the most efficient and comfortable method of transporting troops thus far encountered.

AFTER ACTION REPORT FOR MAY 1-10, 1945

NARRATIVE

On 1 May 1945 the Regimental Combat Team was alerted to move to the FUSSEN (D250900) Area. Later the same day orders were received to move to the XII Corps Area. The Division now being assigned to the XII Corps.

The period 2-5 May was spent in trying to catch up with what remained of the war and the German Army. The Combat Team moved to STARNBERG (Y690460) on 2 May 1945 and to MIESBACH (A068185) on 3 May. On 3 May orders were received to advance and capture BERCHTESGADEN (E8950860).

On 4 May the Combat Team moved out toward the objective. Upon reaching INZELL (E755195) it was discovered that the 3rd Infantry Division, the French 2nd DB Division and the 506th RCT all had the same objective, the capture of BERCHTESGADEN. Resistance was light consisting of roadblocks, blown bridges, and scattered small arms and light automatic weapons fire. Due to the mountainous terrain and narrow defiles progress was slow. News was received that elements of the 3rd Infantry Division had captured the town via the BAD REICHENHALL (E3516) Road. The 3rd Bn. Combat Team was ordered to continue the attack as planned.

On 5 May the Combat Team (-3rd Bn. CT) moved to BERCHTESGADEN by the route used by the 3rd Infantry Division. The 3rd Battalion CT arrived the night of 5 May only light delaying action being encountered along the route of advance. Military Government and law and order were established in the area. The Combat Team was alerted to advance to the South to the BRUCK Area (E8506870). At 1750 the following message was received: "Effective immediately all troops will stand fast on present positions. German Army Group G in this sector has surrendered. No firing on Germans unless fired upon. Notify French units in vicinity. Full details to be broadcast, will be issued by SHAEF."

The period 6-9 May was spent enforcing Military Government, collecting prisoners of war and displaced persons. A party from the Regiment contacted Reesling's Headquarters and arrangements were made for its evacuation. On 7 May the 82nd SS Corps surrendered to the Regiment. V-E Day was spent quietly in BERCHTESGADEN.

On 10 May the regiment with the Rcn. Troop, 813th TD Bn. attached moved to the LEND-BRUCK-STUHLFELDEN-SAALFELDEN Area to enforce the surrender terms, establish military government, and maintain law and order.
HISTORICAL RECORD 11 - 31 May 1945

During the period 11-31 May 1945 this regiment occupied an area in Austria of approximately 453 square miles with troops concentrated in Zell am See, Land, Kuck, Marum, Utendorf, Stuhlfelden, Saalfelden, and Saalbach.

Security was the primary mission. Road blocks and orders caused the cessation of all military and civilian movement except for essential comutation authorized by the 3-4, 8-2, or 7th Army Mission. Barrack made thorough reconnaissance of their areas posting guards on weapons, ammunition, food, military stores, art treasures and documents. During the period arrests were made of individual SS troops under the provisions of the automatic arrest policy. Curfew was enforced by motorized and foot patrols with violators arrested, confined, and expediently tried by military court. No werewolf activities or indications of werewolf activities were noted during the period.

For the first two weeks of the period the troops were mainly occupied with guard and patrol duty. Known distance ranges were built. Preparatory marksmanship was started and other training consisted of close order drill, physical training, and inspections. A minimum of two scheduled hours per week of Information and Education were required. Companies set up information centers. Athletics were stressed with organized inter-company competition in softball and volleyball. Swimming and horseback riding were available. On the 14th of May the boxing team was reform and started training. The first regimental track team was formed on the 28th of May.

Special Service offered two movies daily in the regimental theater at 1400 and 1900. One stage show per week was averaged. Beer in varying amounts was procured and distributed each week to companies and was sold very cheaply at the regimental beach and recreation center in Zell am See. The regimental band played for the battalions and for the regiment. A Red Cross Club was established which served coffee, cakes, and a limited quantity of beer. Supplies were inadequate and upon the recalling of the Red Cross representative the club was closed mainly for lack of supplies.

The special means of handling anti-fraternization initiated by 101st Abn. Division was put into effect in the area. DP's were made distinguishable by placing on them an armband marked DP. Anti-fraternization has been emphasized repeatedly. 70 films were shown and troops have been instructed that the taking of a prophylactic will in no way be construed or implied as a violation of anti-fraternization.
On the 31st of May there were 4,860 DP's (Older in camps or emergency housing) under military control. Approximately 1,150 western Europeans were moved out during the period leaving a small unknown number who had taken up permanent residence in towns and on farms. Living conditions were adequate and sanitation fair. Bedding powder was used in two camps. Insufficient food was the main problem at first, however, this was remedied through a meeting of all camp commanders and the local food administrator. A plan was made whereby food was withdrawn from local civilian stores upon requisition of camp commanders.

Discovery was made of part of the National Library of Poland in the stable at Fischhorn Castle. This collection has been moved into the castle and locked up. Another art collection discovered in a castle near Saalfelden has been moved to Fischhorn. The art treasures that were in Fischhorn Castle when we arrived in the area have been viewed by Division 8-5 and moved into several rooms and locked up. On May 21st discovery was made of a jet-propelled helicopter near Zell am See. This aircraft along with a working model and plans of an infra-red torpedo steering device were reported and subsequently removed by Air Force Intelligence. At present there are 199 of the steering devices under guard.

Records of IC, OKW, and one along with other documents have been turned over to Lt. Owen of T-Force, 6th Army Group.

During the period 32 war criminals were apprehended and imprisoned. Included in the list were such infamous characters as Phillip Bouhler, Nazi No. 12, Reichsleiter and SS Obergruppenführer, and Herman Schindler, SS Oberführer and Minister of Finance, from Danish Government.

No food, clothing or other supplies were given to the German forces. P.W.'s were used to rebuild communication and power lines. German signal technicians rebuilt a radio station. Engineer and other units rebuilt roads and bridges. P.W. labor was used in repairing German military vehicles used by the Military Government. During the period 8-31 the German forces were organized into two commands in the regimental area. General Gehrman was in command of all German forces in the area, Luftwaffe Group IV in command of the Southern part of the regimental area and General Westfall was in command in the North. Between 20-31 the following German forces were evacuated from the regimental area into the Munich Area: Groundsman's Staff, OKW Supreme Command Headquarters, OKW Supreme Command Headquarters, elements of OKW Supreme Command Headquarters, elements of OKW, and German forces of various other commands. The total number of German forces evacuated during the period was approximately 42,000.

During the period 1-30 June 1945 the area occupied by the regiment was decreased to approximately 375 square miles. On 8 June 1945 the 3rd Battalion moved from the Western part of the Landkreis to Saalfelden.

Security policies generally remained the same as in the preceding period with the exception of a new procedure for roadblocks. In order to have accurate information as to movement, roadblocks were ordered to record the license number, type of vehicle, make, time stopped, number of occupants, and direction of travel of all vehicles passing between 2100 and 0500 hours. There were no indications of Werewolf activities during the month.

Training during the period consisted of preliminary marksmanship and practice firing of the M1, preliminary marksmanship in other weapons, physical training, marches, orientation, reviews and close order drill. In the afternoon athletics were stressed with inter-company competition. The regimental track team worked out daily in preparation for the 101st Abn. Division track meet. Eight members of the team competed for the Division in the meet with the 94th Division. The Regimental Boxing team worked out daily and won its only team test during the month by defeating the Division Artillery team. The 506th Baseball team was organized on 10 June, the other scheduled games being postponed by rain.

Special Service continued to offer two shows daily in the Regimental Theater. Beer was procured and distributed. The Regimental orchestra played for company parties. The Red Cross Club was reopened by the new representative.

The use of the DP armbands was continued as a special means of handling non-fraternization. A new distribution of the seven "Battle" orders was made, and the reasons for the non-fraternization policy again emphasized. With the departure of many DP's it is becoming more difficult to enforce the policy.

The movement of DP's out of the area increased with a total of 5896 moved out during the month. The following shipments were made: 15 June, 1978 Russians; 17 June, 649 Italians; 19 June, 1361 Hungarians; 21 June, 110 Czechs, 4 Dutch, 2 Belgians, 6 French, 15 Italians; 27 June, 771 Yugoslavs, 100 Russians, 900 Hungarians and Rumanians. The two DP Camps are at Fischhorn and Kaprun. The sanitary conditions have at times been poor due to overcrowding. There remained 1698 assorted DP's in the area on 30 June.
During the month there were no art treasures or important documents discovered. Twenty-six SS were arrested in the area and the CIC arrested the Minister of War of Croatia. All Arrests were made upon the authority of the automatic arrest clause, and all were evacuated by the CIC.

No food, clothing or other supplies were issued to the German Forces. PW's were used to repair roads and to collect equipment into dumps. Two German service units are utilized in the area to collect German military vehicles and to repair them. Those that are servicable have been turned over to the Military Government.

Two Discharge Centers have been established at Maishofen and Saalfelden. Between the 1st and 30th of June 3001 German soldiers were discharged. The majority of those discharged were released from local hospitals.

Redeployment resulted in a large turnover of personnel, the largest of which took place on 23 June when 385 were transferred to the 501st Parachute Infantry and 655 received from 501st Parachute Infantry.

During the period 1 July to 2 August 1945 the area occupied by the regiment was decreased to approximately 215 square miles of the landkreis of Zell am See. The Third Battalion moved out of the Saalfelden area to the town of Zell am See.

Security policies remained the same as in the preceding period. The only change was the addition of two new division boundary roadblocks; one on the boundary of the French zone at Saalbach and one near the British zone boundary at Ferleiten. Interior roadblocks were decreased to one. There were no indications of Werewolf activities during the month.

Training during the period consisted of individual training in crew served and individual weapons. All units fired preliminary and record courses with individual weapons. A survey for non-swimmers was made and a course of instruction for non-swimmers started. In the afternoons athletics were stressed with inter-company competition. The regimental boxing team won three and lost none against other regimental teams.

Special Service continued to offer two shows daily in the Regimental Theater. Beer was procured and distributed. The regimental orchestra played for company parties. A Fourth of July celebration was held though it was delayed until the 6th of July due to inclement weather. The celebration commenced with a battalion parade through town followed by a talk by the Regimental Commander and Military Governor of the Kreis. A delayed free jump followed by a mass jump into the Zeller See by members of Regimental Headquarters Company was the highlight of the day. Aquatic sports were held with competition in swimming and boat races. Beer and ice cream was served to the troops. Horse races were held on the track at the Bruck Airfield. The celebration closed with fireworks over the lake at 2100 hour.

The relaxation of the non-fraternization policy to allow conversation with adult Austrian nationals in public at first was constrained by the troops to mean an almost complete reversal of the policy. This condition was quickly rectified and enforcement became stricter than before, though more difficult.

Only approximately 150 displaced persons remained in the Regimental Area. The majority of these were employed in the unit messes, the remainder were quartered at the Fischhorn Camp.
No new intelligence targets were located in our area during the month of July. The Vienna Institute of Science was guarded in its temporary installation at Thumersbach. A prisoner of war camp was established at Kaprun to continue maintenance and development of the Kaprun Hydroelectric Project. Prisoners consisted mainly of groups whose homes were in the Russian occupied zone. The discharge center was closed out at Maishofen and moved to Saalfelden under Division Artillery control. Approximately 2,000 individuals were discharged during the month. Six German Army hospitals in Zell am See were closed out under German and American medical supervision.

The unit was alerted to move to the vicinity of Joigny, France on or about 31 July. Movement was by rail and motor. One train departed 31 July, two on 1 August, and the motor element departed 2 August. The unit closed in its new location at Joigny, France on 4 August 1945.
